Women on the Verge

According to the all-female Madrid-based band Hinds, guitar solos are too often just excuses to show off, and so you won't hear many of them on their debut album. "Leave Me Alone," out Jan. 8, traces the phases of love, from falling hard for the wrong guy to avoiding him in public. Though recorded in southern Spain, the lo-fi tracks, with lyrics in English, have a distinctly American garage-rock feel: The women cite postpunk revivalists the Strokes as a major influence. — HILARY MOSS
